Our portrait is of Mr. C. GLASGOW, who writes as follows:
"I am a publican, and had a position of my own, but through the drink habit I lost it, and was in the depths of misery. I was induced to try Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the result was as near a miracle as I ever expect to see. I am today a most happy man, and will be glad to answer any letters sent to me, as I was in great pain until I was advised to get your Tablets, and the wonderful healing up very quickly and now am at peace with myself. Your medicine could not be recommended too highly." Sanderson Street, Aldwick, Manchester.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

Stanley Wootten, who was among the officers wounded in the present offensive, is home, bearing many lacerations caused by contact with barbed wire.

On the way to the post for the Scarry Plate at the Curragh yesterday, Leddiston became unmanageable, and throwing his rider, bolted, and took no part in the race.

Owners and trainers should bear in mind that entries close to-day with Mr. Brindley, 14 Upper Merrion street, Dublin, for Down Royal, Dundalk, Phoenix, Milltown Malbay, Cork Park, Laytown, and Athlone meetings.

Salandra (three years), who was purchased by Mr. Clarence Hailey at Newmarket yesterday morning for 1,000 guineas, will probably fulfil his engagement in the St. George Handicap at Windsor on Saturday week, before being shipped.

J. Hunter, the Conyngham Lodge trainer, and J. Barns, who has stabling at Ballymany, each brought off a double event at the Curragh yesterday, and both Hunter's charges were ridden by the stable jockey, W. Barrett.

Sir John Thursby has sustained a considerable loss by the death of his sire Kenyngeus, which took place at the Black Bonny Stud, Malton, last week. By John o' Gaunt, out of Crescent, Kenyngeus was a good horse, and, though he did not win all that was expected of him, he won the Two Thousand Guineas in 1914, being afterwards beaten for the Derby as well as for the St. Leger. As a two-year-old he accounted for the Dewhurst Plate, a good lot of juvenile merit, and at three years followed home Hapsburg and Honeywood for the Eclipse Stakes, finishing his career on the race-course by winning the Newmarket St. Leger at the First October Meeting.

NEWMARKET BLOODSTOCK SALES.

CURRAGH MEETING—YESTERDAY.
DROGHEDA MEMORIAL STAKES.
VICTORY OF MELMOND.

The July Meeting at the Curragh opened in pleasant weather, and a nice afternoon's racing was witnessed by a fairly large company, from which, however, the cross-Channel element was missing, the result, no doubt, of the slashing with Newmarket. The going was better than it had been for some time, and there were plenty of runners forthcoming for the majority of the events on the card, but hockers, who had such a wonderful run of luck at the June fixture here, met with more than one severe reverse.

Eleanor H. was undertaking a big task for a three-year-old in the Scarry Plate, in which she was conceding weights to all her opponents, notwithstanding which she was always a pronounced favourite. She, however, ran a real good mare, and was far from disgraced in finishing fourthly to give 20lb. and 19lb. respectively, to Benjulia and Ethel H., the former of which pair scored comfortably at the end. Geradinka, who had a pretty busy season, this being her eighth essay, dominated the wagering on the Marble Hill Stakes, and Mr. Cooke's filly was confidentially expected to recoup the losses incurred over Eleanor H. She, however, did not gallop with her accustomed freedom or dash, and never looked like beating Cervino all through, who made light of her efforts to catch him, and won in good style. Captain Whitworth's colt now made his debut in the Breeders' Produce Stakes at Phoenix Park, won by Mordeania, and in that race finished close up with the leading trio. He was disappointing to end only four runners in readiness for the valuable Drogheda Memorial Stakes, which seemed to be looked upon in the light of a match between Melmond and Another Surprise, the latter of whom had not been seen in public since running fourth to Cimarron in the Curragh Grand Prize last October, and was now trained by Mr. Blake's colt on 16lb. better terms. He was also in receipt of considerable poundage from Melmond, and both left off in equal demand at 5 to 4. Another surprise at no part of the contest ever held out any hope to his supporters, but on the other hand, Cimarron, who had run in such disappointing form in the Railway Cup at Derby, jumped into the lead at the start, and held command until a hundred yards from the winning post, when he swerved badly, and Melmond, coming very fast on the rails, won a length a trifle easily in the end. It was a smart performance of Mr. Armstrong's filly, who was not long about supplementing her laurels in the St. Patrick's Stake at the last meeting, and even if Cimarron had kept the straight course yesterday it is doubtful if he would have deprived the daughter of Melmond of his speed.

Little Pickle, who, it will be remembered, finished a good third to Melmond and Aonajeorris at last month, was always in receipt of a deal of daylight in the Plate, but was again fated to occupy that position, and in a desperate set-to Mariano got the better of South Meadow three parts of a length, the latter event for Mr. R. P. Dobell, who also owns Benjulia. Another little finish was seen in the Fair Plate, for which 24 juveniles did battle, and it was only a narrow margin that Ormobridge, who swerved close home, succumbed to an Augur for the Brownstown Plate seven days ago, because of 5 to 1 cause for weakness, and the Conyngham Lodge representative now registered his fifth consecutive win inside a space of five weeks. SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.
Although the Irish Oaks, which constitutes the chief attraction to-day, looks like falling rather flat, the other events should provide good sport, and there will again be no lack of runners. So far as could be ascertained yesterday for the Oaks will be made up of the following:

NEWMARKET MEETING—YESTERDAY.
KNUTSFORD'S SMART WIN.
GAY LALLY WINS CHIEF EVENT.

The improvement noticed in the weather at Newmarket yesterday morning, after a cold and damp interlude following upon the hours usually devoted to training operations, was remarkable, and racing was carried on during the afternoon under delightful conditions. The attendances are becoming materially smaller with the absorption of men into the Services, and consequently the proceedings generally were pleasantly quiet.

One Sera, a maiden entitled to all allowances, was backed against the field for the Trial Plate, for Major Hine, whose representatives also won the first race at Gatwick last week on both the Friday and Saturday. One Sera was afterwards purchased by Lieutenant Stanley Weetson, for his opponents for the Branford Stakes in summary fashion, and won, running away, for Lord Derby whose colours afforded much satisfaction to the spectators. Although Marchetta filly, with whom Lord Derby declared to win, and Knutsford could not be separated in a close market for the Soltykoff Stakes, the actual race supplied a very different sequel, as, once Knutsford got to the head of his field, which he proceeded to do at quite an early stage, he placed the issue beyond doubt, and scored fully as performance which stamps the Whatcombe colt as distinctly the best two-year-old colt seen out this season.

After being on several occasions supported by the public without a satisfactory return for the confidence reposed in him, Mr. Buchanan's good-looking horse, Gay Lally, atoned for his previous failures by winning the Dullingham Plate from two better favourites in Valhalla II. and Hosta, the weights being the last-named, who ran really well, second to Gay Lally. Lilladoon gave the fielders a rare turn in the Spring Hall Handicap, and a capital entertainment concluded with the stylish victory of Via filly in the Thurlow Plate. Mr. Langton's game daughter of Minoru running quite true to her public form.

Irish Unionists and Partition.

The British public is beginning to be puzzled about the Irish negotiations. It wants to know why the terms of the agreement have not been published, why the Amending Bill has not been introduced, and why Irishmen are excited and angry over proposals that were supposed to have received a national imprimatur. We fear that the British public's demands for an explanation are not receiving satisfactory replies. The Liberal newspapers which support the proposed settlement put the blame on Unionist bigotry. The Unionist newspapers which support the settlement put the blame on the Cabinet, and particularly on the Prime Minister, who is pursuing, we are told, his inveterate policy of "drift." Those explanations are both wrong, and the latter is unfair to Mr. Asquith and to the whole Cabinet. The misunderstanding and confusion which now exist were not generated in the Cabinet, but in Ireland. They date from the very beginning of the negotiations. The Ulster Unionists accepted one proposal, and the Nationalist Party accepted an utterly different proposal. The Cabinet, which assumed that they had accepted the same proposal, has just discovered the truth. Optimists believe that the trouble will be removed when the text of the Amending Bill is published. Mr. Redmond professes to be of the same opinion, and he will ask Mr. Asquith to-day to name a date for the production of the Bill. It is understood that the Cabinet to-day will make a final effort to reconcile the demands of the Nationalist Party and of Unionist Ulster. The task, however, is impossible. Mr. Redmond will not dare to accept an exclusion of the six Ulster counties which is not strictly and definitely provisional. Sir Edward Carson has bargained for permanent exclusion, and both the Prime Minister and the Marquis of Lansdowne have assured him that the bargain will be fulfilled. In the letter which we publish to-day Mr. Battersby, K.C., confirms our recent statement that Sir Edward Carson has received from Mr. Lloyd George a written promise of permanent exclusion. Many Irish Unionists have seen this written promise. It is "definite and final in its phraseology."

The real misunderstandings, then, do not exist in the Cabinet, but in Ireland; and both Irish parties are entitled to explanations of them before the Amending Bill is introduced at all. Mr. Battersby thinks, and all southern Unionists will agree with him, that Unionist Ulster should demand such explanations without further delay. Of course, if the Bill does not provide explicitly for the permanent exclusion of the six counties, Unionist Ulster will repudiate it within half an hour of its production. She is morally entitled, however, to repudiate it now on the ground that her signature to it was obtained by false pretences. She accepted partition only because she was assured that partition was an "Imperial necessity." There was not a word of truth in this argument. The Irish rebellion and its prompt suppression did not alter by a hair's breadth the relations of the British Government with the Government of any other Power in the world. On the ground of this fraud alone Unionist Ulster is fully entitled to repudiate her short-sighted and hurried acceptance of permanent exclusion for the six counties. Mr. Battersby suggests other and, as many people will think, even more cogent, reasons for such a repudiation. Thoughtful Ulster Unionists must now realise that their Council's decision was a bad thing for themselves and a bad thing for the whole of Ireland. In the first place, if this Bill becomes law, that decision will abandon twenty-six counties of Ireland to a period of prolonged misgovernment and disorder, and all the true arguments from Imperial necessity plead strenuously against such a misfortune. In the next place, Unionist Ulster has foresworn her solemn Covenant, and to that extent has played into the hands of her political enemies. Its reduction to a "scrap of paper" has made the whole position in Ulster fluid and mobile instead of being what it seemed to be three months ago—planted on the rock of an adamantine and almost sacred resolve. Finally, the Ulster Unionist Council has surrendered its Covenant behind the backs of thousands of the most gallant and loyal men who ever gave their lives in the cause of Empire. No thought of a divided Ulster was in the minds of the splendid Ulster Division which went forth to fight and fall at Thiepval.

Mr. Battersby speaks of the feelings with which southern Unionists regard the acceptance of the partition of Ulster and of Ireland by the Ulster Unionist Council. We do not propose to enlarge on this point: we leave it to the conscience of our northern fellow-countrymen. So far as political help and friendship are concerned, the southern Unionists have much need of both. So far as conscience is concerned, they need and desire no man's sympathy. They are proud, and may well be proud, of the part which they have played in this time of war abroad and revolution at home. The southern Unionists have put their all at their country's service, and have asked nothing in return. They have demanded no special form of government, insisted on no concessions, bound themselves by no pledge; their loyalty to Ireland and to the Empire is unconditional. They are the only body of Irishmen who have not armed themselves in vindication of their local rights. They have refused to be misled by inventions of Imperial necessity, but they are ready to sacrifice everything to its genuine claims. The present negotiations threaten them with the gravest disabilities, but their sole anxiety is for victory in the war. They have not yet demanded a solitary safeguard against the legislation of a Home Rule Parliament in which they would have not more than two representatives. The objections of southern Unionists to the present scheme are purely unselfish, purely national; they have, therefore, we submit, a superior claim to the attention of Parliament and the British people. Southern Unionists are not fighting for their own hand, but for Ireland. They are not now resisting settlement of the Irish question, but only a form of settlement which, as they are convinced, is ill-timed, ill-considered, and pregnant with disaster. We are certain that a majority of Irish Nationalists and a very large number of Ulster Unionists are filled with similar fears and misgivings. It is a tragic thing that, in these circumstances, the English people should still believe that this scheme is an agreed measure, that Ireland wants it, and that the present delays are due merely to misunderstandings in the Cabinet. No Irishman wants this "settlement," and it is every Irishman's duty to make that fact clear before the Bill is introduced in the House of Commons.

Munitions and Holidays.

We do not suppose that the conference of trade unionists of the United Kingdom, which met in London yesterday, needed the stimulus of Sir Douglas Haig's personal message to induce it to recommend the munition-workers to acquiesce in the abandonment of the August holiday. The great offensive has shown them better than any rhetoric how essential their labour is to victory. Without Sir Douglas Haig's inspiring message, however, their attitude might well have been one of resigned acquiescence instead, as we are satisfied it will be now, of passionate enthusiasm to renew the heavy strain of continuous work. They are fully aware that only the unlimited expenditure of ammunition of all kinds in the offensive has made our success possible, and that to the absolute superiority of our artillery is due the relatively small proportion of deaths and serious wounds as compared with the much larger proportion of slight wounds. Sir Douglas Haig assures the munition-workers that the soldiers in the field fully appreciate the efforts which they have made to furnish an ample quantity of guns and ammunition, and equally appreciate their weariness after those efforts. "But if they could see their comrades fighting both day and night with heroism and determination beyond all praise"—which have won the warm tribute of congratulation from the King which we print to-day—"they would not hesitate to surrender two days' rest, and would devote them to maintaining, and, if possible, increasing the supply of guns and shells without which victory is impossible." The munition-workers, however, might have been pardoned for asking what difference two days' rest or two days' work could make. Sir Douglas Haig tells them that it will make an important difference. "Two days' cessation of work in the munition factories must have a most serious effect upon our operations. It might even mean an addition of many months to the war." We do not think that Sir Douglas Haig is resorting to any exaggeration in this statement. The key-note of the present operations on all fronts is persistent pressure on the enemy. They must be given no respite if the object in view is to be achieved; for, if the pressure is even momentarily relaxed, the moral, if not the material, gains of weeks may be lost. The Commander-in-Chief's word is good enough for the munition-workers. The conference has replied to his message, informing him of its decision to recommend postponement of all holidays, general or local, which involve interruption of production "until such time as we are assured by you that military exigencies permit of postponed holidays being taken." We hope that the Government will give the munition-workers every possible recompense for their patriotic decision by making early arrangements for a system of holidays in shifts. There ought to be no insuperable difficulty about such arrangements, and every care must be taken lest the over-willing spirit of the workers should result in an excessive number of cases of breakdown. Provision must be made against such a danger among women workers in particular. The munition-workers' sacrifice of their August holiday, of course, involves all other classes of the community in the same sacrifice. It is essential, as Mr. Montagu said yesterday, to avoid "a holiday atmosphere." There will be no grumbling anywhere after the very confident and definite note on which Sir Douglas Haig's message ends: "Let the whole British nation forego any idea of a general holiday until our goal is reached. A speedy and decisive victory will then be ours."

Armour.

The value of the steel helmets in affording protection against shrapnel has been amply proved in the present offensive, and it is not unnatural that the virtues of body armour should be freely argued from this experience. During the last few days the correspondence columns of The Times have contained many letters accusing the Government of wasting lives through failure to provide such armour. Yesterday, however, a correspondent who has made practical experiments in the matter presented a case which seems to acquit the Government of neglect. He pointed out that, while helmets have afforded protection against shell fragments because their round shape deflects them, a direct advance against rifle or machine-gun fire is a very different thing. Against a bullet travelling at a high velocity flat body shields of plates of metal would in many cases be not only no protection, but the cause of ghastly wounds. The correspondent proves his point by stating that he has tested two plates of steel three-eighths of an inch thick, bound back to back, with four layers of quarter-inch rubber sheets between them. At one hundred and fifty yards rifle bullets went through these like paper, carrying with them fragments of the steel plates. He concludes that only heavy steel shields, which would be difficult to carry, would afford protection. The evidence seems to be conclusive; but room remains for some experiment in collective armour—a modern variant of the Roman testudo. We should not be surprised if the Irish rebellion proves ultimately to have supplied the germ of new ideas in field equipment. One of the most successful devices in the street fighting in Dublin was the improvised armoured cars in the shape of loop-holed boilers mounted on motor-lorries. It is in very much the same character of fighting that we sustain our heaviest losses in France—as, for example, in the reduction of the ruins of Ovillers, where a desperate handful of Prussian Guardsmen, with machine-guns, held up the advance for days on end. In close operations of this kind the support of heavy artillery is out of the question, and the assaulting infantry, if they are to have any protection at all, must carry it themselves in the shape of armour. Experiment may evolve before long some kind of collective armour mounted on wheels or runners and adapted from the experience of the street-fighting in Dublin.

REBELLION INCIDENT AT GUINNESS'S BREWERY.

CAREERS OF LIEUTENANTS LUCAS AND WORSWICK.

One of the tragedies of the Dublin Rebellion—the shooting of Lieutenant A. Lucas and Lieutenant Worswick, of the 2nd King Edward's Horse, at Guinness's Brewery, on the 28th April last—has attracted some further attention in the London and Canadian newspapers. It will be remembered that after a trial of two days by a court-martial presided over by Major-General Lord Cheylesmore, Quartermaster-Sergeant Robert Flood, of the 5th Royal Dublin Fusiliers, was acquitted on charges arising out of the deaths of Lieutenant Lucas and an esteemed employé of the brewery named W. J. Rice, who were shot dead by soldiers on the third floor of the malt-house. Shortly afterwards Lieutenant Worswick and Mr. Dockeray, another gentleman employed for many years at the brewery, were shot on the second floor of the malt-house. Worswick was stated to have previously struck Quartermaster-Sergeant Flood with his fist, and used the words Sinn Feiners at the time of the affair it was pitch dark in the malthouse, and the only lights used were the electric torches of the soldiers. Lord Cheylesmore subsequently stated specifically that "There was no evidence whatever produced at the courtmartial that Lucas was in any way connected with the Sinn Feiners, or that he was in sympathy with them; nor," his lordship added, "was there any evidence whatever to justify any suspicion of the loyalty and good character of Mr. Lucas."

These statements were rendered necessary because the deceased's friends and brother officers believed that the public had formed the erroneous impression from the report of the proceedings that Lieutenant Lucas and Lieutenant Worswick, who had lost their lives under such tragic circumstances, were in sympathy with the Sinn Feiners, or connected with them. There was no public investigation into the circumstances attending the death of Lieutenant Worswick his case being governed by the decline in that of Lieutenant Lucas.

Second Lieutenant Worswick joined the 2nd King Edward's Horse in August, 1914, when it was first formed, and served with it continuously until the day of his death. He left with the regiment for France on May 4th, and served in the trenches till he was offered his commission by the Colonel while he was still in the trenches, serving as a trooper. He returned to England to take up his commission at the end of September, 1915, and was gazetted on October 2nd, 1915. When the rebellion broke out he was stationed with the 2nd King Edward's Horse at the Curragh, and the unanimous testimony of his brother officers and friends is that he had no sympathy or association of any kind with the Sinn Feiners. Lieutenant Lucas, who was a Graduate of Cambridge University, had been offered the adjutancy of his regiment just before his death. He left a prosperous business in Canada for active service, and was wounded at Festubert.

IRISH UNIONIST ALLIANCE.

JUNIOR BRANCH'S PROTEST.

At a meeting of the Junior Branch of the Irish Unionist Alliance the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"That we, the Executive Committee of the Irish Unionist Alliance (Junior Branch), representing thousands of Unionists in the South and West of Ireland, deplore the re-opening of the Home Rule question during the present crisis as a reward for rebellion; and regard it as a breach of the truce given by His Majesty's Government—that nothing of a contentious nature would be introduced during the period of the war—on the strength of which thousands of our fellow-Unionists joined His Majesty's Forces; and we consider it an outrage that a Home Rule Parliament should be established during their absence. We regard the above truce as solemn and important as any treaty made between nations. We, therefore, refuse to accept the serious responsibility of being a party to any such so-called settlement."

THE KING AND QUEEN.

The King and Queen left London early yesterday afternoon, attended by a Lady and Gentleman-in-Waiting, and motored to Epsom, where they lunched with the Earl of Rosebery at The Durdans. Their Majesties visited wounded soldiers in the military hospital at Epsom.

Exchequer returns for April 1st to July 15th show receipts £87,039,781, expenditure £524,886,067. Corresponding period last year—Receipts £62,818,534, expenditure £303,275,515.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

153 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

Statements in both Houses were made to-day in regard to Mesopotamia. It will be remembered that on June 1st Mr. Bonar Law undertook that papers on the subject, after being edited so as to exclude information of use to the enemy, should be laid before Parliament, which would then be given an opportunity of discussing them. Mr. Asquith had to explain to-day that the promise of papers could not be redeemed, because the Army Council had come to the conclusion that so much must necessarily be omitted that the residue would be misleading. The same remark applied to the Dardanelles despatches, which had also been promised.

The logical sequel to this would have been a further statement that, in the circumstances, a debate would be useless. But Mr. Asquith was evidently afraid to try the temper of the House too far, and therefore suggested that they should discuss the matter on Thursday, when he would move the adjournment at the outset in order to furnish an opportunity.

Sir Edward Carson thought it strange that they should be asked to review "this terrible business" without any authentic information to go upon, and asked that they should at least have the reports on stores and transport to which the Prime Minister had referred. Thousands of people who had given their sons and relatives thought the matter had been conducted with criminal negligence. Mr. Redmond asked whether the House would be allowed to discuss the Dardanelles expedition on a similar basis of rumour and private information, and Mr. Lynch suggested that a secret session would be the best way out of the difficulty. But the Prime Minister deprecated the repetition of an experiment which had not been a great success.

In the House of Lords Lord Crewe made a similar statement to that of Mr. Asquith, and explained the delay of the Army Council in deciding against publication on the ground that it could not come to a decision until it had the papers as a whole. Lord Midleton thought it a pity that the Vincent Commission was not instructed to report

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE IRISH BILL.

It is understood, says The Times, that the Cabinet will consider the draft Irish Bill at their meeting to-day, and that an earnest effort will be made to obtain a final decision so that the terms of the measure can be communicated to Parliament early next week.

MESOPOTAMIAN QUESTIONS.

In ordinary circumstances, says The Times, we should be much influenced by the considered opinion of the naval, military, and diplomatic advisers of the Government that it is inexpedient to publish the Dardanelles papers at present, but we must protest at once against the Prime Minister's suggestion that publication is rendered additionally difficult by the lamented death of Lord Kitchener. We are glad that the independent members on both sides of the House of Commons intend to press the Government for further information, and that they propose to demand assurances about the present condition of our troops. Mr. Asquith left much unsaid. All our blunders and misfortunes in Mesopotamia flowed from the decision to advance from Kut to Bagdad, and we must get back to that point if we are to prevent their recurrence and retrieve their effects.

CHEAP BRAINS AND UNREST.

Professor W. Alison Phillips writes from Trinity College, Dublin, to The Times:—An inexhaustible supply of cheap trained brains may be an advantage to the great captains of industry, but clearly it is also a reservoir of social and political discontent and unrest. Education, after all, expands not only the capacities, but also the desires and the needs, and to extend and popularise our system of higher education without such a reconstruction of our social and economic system as should guarantee to the increased mass of educated men and women the prospect of a reasonably liberal existence would be as cruel as it would be dangerous. This does not, of course, imply any condemnation of the efforts, by means of University extension and other organisations, to spread the capacity for an intelligent appreciation of men and things among people of all classes.

A NECKLESTED GARDEN.

The Times publishes to-day the following poem by Miss Eleanor Alexander, daughter of the late Primate of All Ireland:—

Barren the garden lies, undressed,
Long weeds like serpents coil and squeeze
Forsaken lovers of flowering bees;
Boughs broken to the ground are pressed;
Columbines, heartsease, picotees
No more greet evening from the west,
Nor lilies gleam their love to the night—
Where are the roses of our lost delight?

Deep-rooted to the sun they glow
In a new world's eternal spring;
Low at our feet the tendrils cling;
High in the Eden trees the sunne
The birds among their branches sing,
From crag and strand and plain they grow—
France, unsacred Africa, the cold North Sea,
Mesopotamia, and Gallipoli.

Let the neglected garden lie;
There is no need for English flowers,
These by a right divine are ours.
These bloom for ever under every sky,
Droop in no frosts of autumn die—
These by no frosts of autumn die—
Immortal loveliness for the bleak years,
Fed with our heart's blood, watered with our tears.

ELEANOR ALEXANDER.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Although prices again declined in most of the leading markets, says The Times, and buyers were still somewhat shy, there appeared to be a more confident feeling at the close in several directions, there being signs of a recovery from the lowest points reached. Business was a little more active, the number of bargains recorded being 3,000, an increase of over 200 as compared with Monday's level.

ULSTER'S "CONSENT."

LETTER FROM MR. T. S. F. BATTERSBY, K.C.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The Radical Press daily proclaims that the Irish "settlement" must go through, having received the "consent" of Ulster Unionists and Ulster Nationalists. How was that consent obtained? It is common property that no party in Ireland wants exclusion. No one asked for it. All, Nationalist and Unionist alike, hate it. Ireland demands unity now or hereafter. Unionist Ulster assents, or assented, to exclusion in answer to an appeal to her patriotism and on the understanding that it was to be a definite—i.e., a final—settlement; and even then she possibly would not have assented because she thought that the Nationalists would refuse it. Sir Edward Carson concurred, we are told, on the grave assurance by the Minister of Munitions that the settlement was vital for the safety of the Empire. Nationalists in Ulster agreed on the assurance of Mr. Redmond that the proposal was temporary—i.e., for the period of the war.

Sir Edward Carson produced to his Ulster Council a letter from Mr. Lloyd George containing the clearest assurances of permanent exclusion. Mr. Redmond, on the other hand, told his Convention that you, sir, were guilty of a deliberate falsehood in stating that such a letter existed. Well, the matter is no longer a secret. Some of us have seen that letter: many of us know its contents. It exists. It is definite and final in its phraseology. But was its existence not disclosed by Mr. Lloyd George to Mr. Redmond when, by denying that existence, he induced the Convention to vote for the "abomination and blasphemy" of exclusion? His words demonstrate that it was not disclosed. Again, was Sir Edward Carson informed by Mr. George that that letter was without the authority of the Cabinet? We now know it had no such authority, just as we know that the "settlement" was not vital for the safety of the Empire.

In one word, was Ulster—Unionist and Nationalist—tricked, and, if so, may not, should not, either or both protagonists repudiate their consent? Is it not their duty to do so?

It is difficult for southern Unionists—whose interests Ulster promised to safeguard—to understand the position of our northern friends, who have apparently not only deserted them, but have broken their own solemn Covenant, and now—though they know that the presence of Imperial necessity was, like the famous scare of a German invasion at the time of the great coal strike, a "put up job" to beguile innocent patriots and thus to obtain a settlement otherwise impossible—make no sign of repudiation, or even of indignation, at having been trapped by fraud into consent. One would have thought that long before this a meeting of the Ulster Council would have been peremptorily summoned and the "consent" have been torn in shreds.

In the absence of any such move our Ulster friends must not be surprised if outsiders begin to think that they were only concerned with their own security, and that, having obtained that, they now turn the blind eye towards the South and West, and leave their, once, fellow-Unionists to stew in their own juice.

The position of the Ulster Nationalists is still more astonishing. By their silence in the certain knowledge of their permanent exclusion they tacitly approve it, and finally exclude themselves from Ireland.

Lastly, if a public opinion exists outside of Ulster, is there not one Nationalist with the courage, to summon a convention and let us know what all Ireland really thinks of this ill-begotten monstrosity?—Yours, etc.,

T. S. FRANE BATTERSBY.

Dublin, July 18th, 1916.

THE KING AND THE TROOPS.

CONGRATULATIONS TO SIR DOUGLAS HAIG.

PRESS BUREAU, TUESDAY, 8 P.M.

The following telegrams have passed between the King and General Sir Douglas Haig:—

To General Sir Douglas Haig.

July 16th, 1916.

The continued successful advance of my troops fills me with admiration, and I send my best wishes to all ranks. The Emperor of Russia has asked me to convey his warm congratulations to the troops upon the great success they have achieved.

GEORGE R.I.

General Sir Douglas Haig to the King.

July 17th, 1916.

The British Armies in France offer most respectful and grateful thanks for this further mark of Your Majesty's gracious appreciation of what they have achieved. They also respectfully beg that their grateful acknowledgments may be conveyed to the Emperor of Russia for His Majesty's congratulations.

DOUGLAS HAIG.

THE PROPERTY LOSSES (IRELAND) COMMITTEE.

The Committee have intimated that the notification of claims for property lost or destroyed in connection with the recent disturbances must be made to the Secretary of the Committee, at 51 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, not later than the 12th August next.

NO HOME RULE REFERENDUM.

Major NEWMAN asked the Prime Minister whether he was aware of the constitution of the Convention of Nationalists that was recently assembled in Belfast to consider the approval of the proposal to bring the Government of Ireland Act into operation for a part of Ireland, and whether he would follow the precedent of the Scandinavian Kingdoms, and allow Ireland to decide by referendum whether she was willing, after the actual proposals had been published in the form of a White Paper, to accept the proposals for self-government therein set out.

Mr. ASQUITH—With regard to the first part of the question, I know no more than what has appeared in the public Press on this subject. I do not think it would be possible to adopt the suggestion contained in the last part of the question.

Sir EDWARD CARSON—Is there anything to prevent the hon. and learned member going and holding a meeting himself? (Laughter.)

Mr. ASQUITH—Nothing that I know of.

CORK AND PARTITION.

PROPOSED PROTEST MEETING.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

CORK, TUESDAY.

A committee of Cork Nationalists, which has been formed with the object of promoting a non-party public meeting to protest against the exclusion of the south Ulster counties and Donegal boroughs from participation in Home Rule, waited upon the Lord Mayor of Cork to-day, and requested him to call a public meeting for Friday night, when Mr. L. Ginnell, M.P., would be the principal speaker. It was recognised that in the ordinary course the applications for the use of the City Hall should be made to the Corporate Committee having the management of the building, but his lordship was pressed to deal with the application as a matter of urgency. The Lord Mayor, however, said that he could not see his way to do so.

The next meeting of the City Hall Committee will be held on the 26th inst., and the promoters of the anti-partition demonstration are endeavouring to avoid delay by obtaining the use of some other meeting place. There is a steadily increasing volume of public opinion amongst all parties in favour of the view that the Home Rule question should be dropped until after the war, so as to give the country a chance to get free from the domination of the Republican Party, which now openly boasts that, had they not organised the rebellion in the country, no more would have been heard of Home Rule.

COAL PORTERS' STRIKE.

With the exception of cargoes for importing firms outside the Dublin Coal Merchants' Association, no unloading of coal steamers appeared to be taking place at the port of Dublin yesterday, and no change was reported in the general situation. Carters and others who were automatically affected by the stoppage of supplies are hard hit by the strike. Four coal heavers, working together as a "gang" in a ship's hold were yesterday stated to have divided £13 between them for a few days' work.

REFUSAL TO UNLOAD A VESSEL AT KINGSTOWN.

The s.s. Cumbria, of Liverpool, has arrived at Kingstown, with a cargo of coal for Messrs. Tedcastle, McCormick, and Co. The Kingstown coal porters yesterday refused to discharge her on the ground that her usual destination was Dublin. Owing to the present strike in the city, they regarded her as "tainted." The Cumbria still lies in the harbour unloaded. About 1,000 tons of coal are aboard.

COLONEL ARTHUR LEE, M.P., KNIGHTED BY THE KING.

Colonel Arthur Lee, M.P., a member of Mr. Lloyd George's staff at the War Office, was received by the King yesterday, when His Majesty bestowed upon him the Order of Knighthood, and presented him with the insignia of the K.C.B. (Civil).

PROHIBITION OF ARMS IN IRELAND.

THE NEW ORDER.

Under the Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, General Sir John Maxwell, Commanding-in-Chief the Forces in Ireland, has made an Order, which will come into force immediately in Ireland, in reference to the carrying of firearms. The Order prohibits the carrying of firearms or military arms in Ireland except by members of His Majesty's naval or military forces, or of the Dublin Metropolitan Police or the Royal Irish Constabulary. It does not apply to duly licensed persons carrying shot guns for sporting purposes, to occupiers of land who desire to scare birds or kill vermin on their land, or to persons specially authorised, in writing, by the competent military authority to carry firearms.

DUNGANNON COUNCILLORS AND THE ULSTER DIVISION.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

BELFAST, TUESDAY.

At the Dungannon Urban Council meeting on Monday evening reference was made to several local officers who had fallen in the recent fighting, and a resolution was proposed placing on record the Council's admiration of the gallantry displayed by the Ulster Division in its historic charge on 1st July, and its sorrow at the deaths of officers and men, and sympathy with the wounded and with the bereaved relatives.

Mr. James Quinn (Nationalist) objected to the resolution on the ground that many local soldiers outside the Ulster Division had been killed during the past two years without any reference being made by the Council. The Ulster Division had brought no glory to the province nor to anyone. After two years' training the Division had only made one fight, and the progress was small. The resolution meant that all the credit was being given to men who had spent two years in training.

Mr. John Skelington (another Nationalist Councillor) supported the resolution, and said that the Ulster Division had covered itself with glory, and in his opinion the blood which had been spilled in France by all Irish regiments would have a good effect in the civil life after the war. (Hear, hear.) All Irish regiments had fought well, and he considered that an addendum should be made to the resolution expressing unqualified admiration of the men of all the other Irish regiments killed or wounded during the war, and tendering deep sympathy with their relatives.

The resolution, as amended was unanimously adopted.

The death is announced at Oxford, at the age of 81, of Mrs. Max Müller, widow of Professor Max Müller.

MORE PROGRESS REPORTED.

STRONG POSITIONS CAPTURED.

ADVANCE ON THOUSAND YARDS FRONT.

KING'S MESSAGE TO SIR DOUGLAS HAIG.

The King has addressed a congratulatory message to Sir Douglas Haig on the "continued successful advance" of the troops in France. His Majesty joins with his own the congratulations of the Emperor of Russia on the great success our troops have achieved.

Notwithstanding the mist and incessant rain, Sir Douglas Haig is able to report further "substantial progress" north of Ovillers on a front of a thousand yards. The enemy were driven out of several strongly defended points, and some prisoners and guns were taken.

South of the Somme the Germans made repeated, but unsuccessful, attacks on French positions between Biaches and La Maisonnette. The enemy suffered heavily.

The Berlin report mentions heavy artillery preparations by the French on both sides of the Somme; also attacks against Pozieres and other points.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

BRITISH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, TUESDAY, 1.30 P.M.

Thick mist and incessant rain is interfering with our operations in the neighbourhood of the Somme.

North of Ovillers our troops made substantial progress last night on a front of 1,000 yards.

The enemy were driven out of several strongly-defended positions, and we captured some prisoners and six machine guns.

Near Wytschaete we made a successful raid into the German trenches.

Opposite Ailly-sur-Noye a similar attempt by the enemy was repulsed by our fire.

11.13 P.M.

This evening, after bombardment with lachrymatory and gas shells, the Germans commenced an attack against our positions in the vicinity of Longueval-Delville Wood. Heavy fighting is still in progress.

Elsewhere on the front nothing of importance to report.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Yesterday afternoon's Paris communiqué:—

To the south of the Somme the Germans attacked yesterday at the close of the evening and in the course of the night.

Despite repeated attempts, which cost them heavy losses, the enemy was unable to gain possession of La Maisonnette.

Some fractions of the enemy stole along the canal in the portion to the east of Biaches, where the fighting continues.

On the left bank of the Meuse a surprise attack directed against our trenches on Hill 304 failed under our fire.

The night was marked by grenade fighting in the neighbourhood of La Cappelle and St. Fine to the west of Fleury. Everywhere the enemy was repulsed.

The artillery fighting was rather lively in the region of Launee-Chenois.

On the rest of the front the night was calm.

Last night's Paris communiqué:—

South of the Somme the day was comparatively calm. The enemy did not renew his attempts against La Maisonnette. We drove the Germans from the few houses which they held in the village of Biaches. There is nothing of importance to record on the rest of the front.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Belgian communiqué:—

Last night a detachment carried out a raid on enemy trenches to the north of Dixmude. It succeeded in penetrating one of them, killing most of the occupants and brought back some unwounded prisoners. During the day there was weak artillery activity.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

At numerous points on the northern portion of our front enemy patrols were repulsed before our obstacles. One of our patrols returned from a raid on a British trench with one officer, four non-commissioned officers, and eleven men prisoners.

On both sides of the Somme the enemy was engaged in artillery preparation yesterday. Strong attacks were launched yesterday evening and last night against Pozières and the position to the east of Pozières, against Biaches, La Maisonnette, Barleux, and Soyecourt, but everywhere failed with great losses.

In the Meuse sector there was temporary violent fire and minor hand grenade fighting.

GERMAN REPORT OF ATTACK ON SEAHAM.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

AMSTERDAM, TUESDAY.

The German official communiqué says:—On July 11 one of our submarines shelled the ironworks at Seaham, to the British East coast. During the period from July 10 to 14 our submarines on the East coast sank seven British steam trawlers and fishing boats.

The message adds:—Note to Editor—It should be added by way of comment that British fishermen are keeping watch and doing intelligence work for the British Navy, whether chartered by the Admiralty or not.

REGISTRATION AND ELECTION.

PROPOSAL TO APPOINT SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Government motion for the appointment of a Select Committee on Registration and Election was last night handed in in the following terms:—

Mr. Secretary Samuel—Registration and Election—That a Select Committee be appointed to consider and report whether it is practicable and desirable to prepare a new electoral register which would include adequate representation for those engaged in the war or in war work, and to conduct an election upon such register during the war, and, if this is found practicable and desirable, to recommend the changes in the electoral laws which would be necessary or expedient for the purpose; that the Committee do consist of Sir Lyland Adkins, Sir Frederick Banbury, Sir John Bethell, Lieutenant-Colonel Campion, Mr. Ellis Davies, Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Hazleton, Mr. Joynson-Hicks, Mr. Ronald McNeill, Mr. MacVeagh, Mr. Nield, Mr. Parker, Mr. Pringle, Sir John Simon, and Sir George Younger.

That the Committee have power to send for persons, papers, and records. That five be the quorum.

The motion will be the first order of the day to-day.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES IN CAUCASUS.

TSAR'S MESSAGE TO GRAND DUKE.

GENERAL SAHAROFF'S ACHIEVEMENT IN VOLHYNIA.

The Tsar has issued a special message of thanks to the Grand Duke Nicholas, Commander-in-Chief in the Caucasus, thanking him and the troops under him for the splendid successes achieved.

General Saharoff's brilliant achievement in Volhynia, in addition to the captures of prisoners reported yesterday, has enabled the Russians to clear the enemy from the left bank of the Lower Lipa. Judging by the large quantity of war material abandoned by the enemy, it would seem that they withdrew in great disorder.

Petrograd communiqué, issued on Monday night:—

The Tsar yesterday sent to the Commander-in-Chief at Tiflis the following telegram:—

"I learn with joy of your renewal of the offensive and the important successes gained by my valiant Caucasians. I send them my warm thanks, and express to them my confidence that their further services will be also marked by valour and devotion.

"NICHOLAS."

On the western front, a Zeppelin flying over Riga, dropped thirteen bombs on different quarters of the town.

North-westwards of Kimpolung detachments of Russian cavalry are advancing along the Kirlibaba-Maramaros-Sziget road. (Kirlibaba is a pass in the Carpathians).

In Volhynia, in the region of the left bank of the Lower Lipa, our troops continue to press the enemy back.

Prisoners are continuing to come in.

South-west of Kimpolung elements of our cavalry debouched on the road from Kirlibaba to Maramaros Sziget.

One of our reports describes a fight in the air which took place over the enemy's encampments west of Dvinsk positions, and which was remarkable for the coolness and courage displayed by our airmen.

Volunteer Airsman Pilchard and Observer Second-Lieutenant Kovenko set out on an air reconnaissance beyond Abeli Railway Station. Our machine was suddenly attacked from the rear by a Fokker. The observer, Second-Lieutenant Kovenko, who was at the hand, but this did not prevent our machine from wheeling round, and, in its turn, attacking the enemy, who was put to flight.

After that our machine continued its reconnaissance, which it carried to a successful conclusion.

Beyond the Rakishki Railway Station the Fokker again attacked our machine, damaging it in several places by well-aimed fire. Nevertheless, under our machine-gun fire the Fokker rapidly flew off out of sight, but it soon returned, and attacked our machine for the third time, when Lieutenant Kovenko, in spite of his wound, was stopping up a hole, which a bullet had made in the radiator to prevent leakage of water, which would have forced our machine to land all too soon.

Lieutenant Kovenko received a second wound this time from an explosive bullet in the stomach, but in spite of the gravity of the wound he completely filled his and sat down again at the machine, opening fire. The Fokker was soon brought down.

Puchael, in spite of the serious damage to his machine, which was gradually coming down, and of the fire of the enemy's batteries, continued his flight, and, with amazing courage and presence of mind, brought the machine back to the aerodrome, with Lieutenant Kovenko gravely wounded and unconscious.

Yesterday's Petrograd communiqué, dated 1.35 p.m.:—

Western front—In the region of Riga positions there has been an artillery duel. The Germans attempted at many places to recapture trenches which they had lost, but without success.

As a result of the last clever manœuvre carried out by the troops under General Sakharoff, in the Volhynia theatre, we gained a victory on Sunday which brought us thirteen thousand prisoners and thirty guns, and on Monday yesterday, and also enabled us to clear the enemy entirely from the left bank of the Lower Lipa, and to drive him back towards Krassoff and to the other side of the river. To judge from the large quantity of war material abandoned by the enemy, he must have withdrawn in great disorder. It is announced that of the seventeen heavy guns captured from the enemy some of them were already being used yesterday to bombard the enemy's positions on the south bank of the river.

German prisoners captured by us were wearing all sorts of uniforms, which goes to prove the mixed character of their latest formations.

Caucasus front—The offensive on the right wing of the Army of the Caucasus was continued yesterday, when some detachments of our mountain Cossacks achieved a great success in courageously dislodging the enemy from some strongly-organised positions. At some places the Cossacks not only reached the snow line, but even crossed it. In the region of the town of Medjiddag we captured two machine guns and a quantity of arms, and took some prisoners. In the Taurus region we captured a whole Turkish company. In the course of the attack on Baibuft, on the 15th, we captured a Turkish flag.

GERMAN REPORT.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

Army group of General von Hindenburg—South and south-east of Riga the Russians continue to make strong assaults, which have collapsed with great loss before our trenches, or were repulsed by counter-attacks, where the enemy succeeded in penetrating our trenches.

Army group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—There is nothing of importance to report.

Army group of General von Linsingen—The situation is generally unchanged. Russian attacks west and south-west of Lutsk were completely repulsed.

Army group of General von Bothmer—Apart from minor skirmishes on the ground before our trenches there is nothing to report.

AUSTRIAN ADMISSION.

Yesterday's Vienna communiqué:—

Russian theatre of war—There were no important events yesterday. In the Bukovina district, north of the Prislop ridge, near Zabie Tatarefi, the Russians pressed back our advanced posts, but their attacks on our main positions failed, with heavy losses to them. North of Radnivilof, and south-west of Lutsk enemy assaults were also repulsed.

PARLIAMENT.

THE BATTLE OF JUTLAND BANK.

PETROL SHORTAGE. EDUCATION VOTE.

In the House of Lords yesterday, the Duke of Rutland suggested that the House should express its thanks to Admiral Jellicoe and the officers and men of the Grand Fleet for their services in connection with the battle of Jutland Bank.

Lord Crewe, while expressing the Government's appreciation of the splendid services of the Grand Fleet, pointed out that in the present war no such votes had been passed. He thought it would be better to defer action in the matter until a period which he hoped would not be long delayed.

Lord Stanmore informed Lord Montagu of Beaulieu that, in consequence of the shortage of petrol, it would be necessary to place severe restrictions on the use of it.

HOUSE OF LORDS—Tuesday.

The LORD CHANCELLOR took his seat on the Woolsack at a quarter past four o'clock.

The Police, etc. (Miscellaneous Provisions), Bill and the Output of Bear (Restriction) Bill were read a second time.

The Royal Marines Bill passed through Committee.

The National Insurances (Munition Workers) Bill and the Marriage of British Subjects (Facilities) Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Finance Bill was brought up from the Commons and read a first time.

The Re-election of Ministers Bill was read a second time.

THE JUTLAND BANK BATTLE.

The Duke of RUTLAND asked whether it was the intention of the Government to move immediately a resolution, conveying the thanks of Parliament to Admiral Sir John Jellicoe and the officers and men of the Grand Fleet for the victory obtained by them at the Battle of Jutland Bank. The noble lord quoted the precedents of the Napoleonic wars for such a course as he had suggested, and said that under the somewhat special circumstances Admiral Jellicoe and the officers and men of the Grand Fleet deserved special recognition at the hands of the representatives of the country. Referring to what he described as the first unfortunately-worded announcement issued by the Admiralty in regard to the Jutland Bank battle, he said that the impression was created that we had suffered losses amounting to a defeat, and he believed he was right in saying that when many of the wounded men from the Fleet were landed at Queensferry and other ports they were actually hooted by the onlookers. He did not possess from personal knowledge, that one or two officers, when they landed, were actually twitted by the onlookers with having run away when taken part in an unsuccessful action. This was very largely owing to the message issued by the Admiralty. He thought it due to Sir John Jellicoe and the officers and men of the Fleet that at any rate it should be made clear to them that we did not believe they had met with defeat. Parliament would not be defending its privilege or going beyond its functions in expressing its appreciation of the gallantry, determination, and skill shown by the officers and men of the Grand Fleet on the occasion of the battle of Jutland Bank.

LORD CREWE.

The Marquis of CREWE said he was certain that the suggestion of the noble duke would elicit the sympathies of all their lordships, as in principle it did in sympathies of the Government. They would all of them be glad to hasten the expression of any form of thanks which could assure the Fleet how they recognised not only the consummate strategy of the Commander-in-Chief and his subordinate commanders, but the devotion and coolness of all ranks during the actual progress of the engagement, the special deeds of gallantry enumerated in Sir John Jellicoe's despatch, the dash and gallantry shown by the lighter craft, and last but not least, the splendid skill and endurance of the engineroom departments. (Hear, hear.) The thanks of Parliament by former precedent expressed on the floor of the House were a reflex of the nation's pride and gratitude, after what had been accurately described as a naval victory. It was suddenly, so obviously, and so well seen, by the irreparable loss of gallant seamen, but the enemy's material loss was both intrinsically greater than ours and relatively enormously greater in proportion to her naval strength. The reduced and battered German Fleet had to make the best of its way back to its base, save only by the approach of darkness from destruction, and the unchallenged command of the North Sea and of all seas still rested with us. At the same time we must guard against any apprehension for a short period. That apprehension might have been widely spread, though he trusted it had not found itself a form such as that spoken of by his noble friend. By now that misconception had completely disappeared, and everybody who had studied the facts of the battle knew the facts. But in this war it had so far not been their practice to express their formal thanks to those British commanders who had earned them, either by sea or by land. Cases would arise to the recollection of the House, in which precedent would have fully justified such a course, but it must be remembered that in the long days this constituted almost the only form of public thanks that was possible. The newspapers were the real dear, debates in Parliament were unreported. Now the sailors and soldiers could read in the nation's eyes the nation's gratitude, and for these reasons the Government were of thought the time to postpone for a time only those formal tributes of honour to the commanders, and to those who served under them. That time, he hoped might not be very long was the heartfelt wish not only of the Government, but of the whole House and country. (Cheers.)

LORD BERESFORD.

...Lord BERESFORD said this was a very peculiar case. There was a despatch issued in regard to which the officers and men of the Fleet felt most keenly. When they landed, the population thought they had been beaten, and the despatch rather justified the impression that was abroad. They had never been defeated and hoped he could vouch for. One could imagine the effect upon officers and men who had fought the most desperate battle that had been fought in the history of the world. The action in which Sir David Beatty had held the German Fleet for four hours had never been equalled. (Cheers.) Therefore, he supported the view of his noble friend that there had not been enough made by the constituted authorities of an action as the result of which eventually the war would be brought to a successful conclusion. He did not think the German Fleet would come out again. They would be very foolish if they did, and if they did not, it meant that the mastery of the sea was assured to us with absolute certainty. It was assured to us now. All that happened in that action was not command of the sea. We could not command the weather, and nothing could be better than the strategical and tactical skill shown by our Admirals. Having said these things, he hoped the Government would appreciate that it would be a graceful act on their part to say something which would remove the feeling of distress and disappointment of the officers and men of that splendid Fleet, occasioned by their reception when they came home. (Hear, hear.)

PETROL SHORTAGE.

Lord STANMORE, in reply to Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, said that as the result of inquiries, there was no doubt there was a serious shortage in the supply of petrol. Drastic restrictions in the use of petrol would have to be applied to all forms of motor vehicles. It was impossible to consider the use of benzol as a substitute for petrol, as the former was required for the purposes of the manufacture of high explosives.

The House adjourned at 7.5.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—Tuesday.

The SPEAKER took the chair at 2.45.

ENGLAND AND GREECE.

Lord ROBERT CECIL informed Sir Edwin Cornwall that our relations with the present Greek Government were regarded as satisfactory.

GERMANS AND ENGLISH TITLES.

Mr. ASQUITH, replying to Mr. Swift MacNeill, said that the case of His Highness Prince Albert John Charles Frederick Alfred George of Schleswig-Holstein, now in arms against the Sovereign, and who is a G.C.V.O. and a G.C.B., was not an isolated one. Before taking steps to expel him from these Orders of Knighthood there must be a consideration of all the cases.

PETROL RESTRICTIONS.

Mr. HARCOURT, replying to a question, said—I fear that, from the beginning of next month, it may be necessary for a time to restrict, by a system of licences, the supply of petrol for the use of trade cars by some 40 per cent. of the supplies desired. In the case of private cars, the amount of the restriction will certainly be greater.

CASEMENT'S APPEAL.

MR. JUSTICE DARLING ON TREASON.

THE APPEAL DISMISSED.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM.)

LONDON, Tuesday.

The Court of Criminal Appeal to-day upheld the conviction of Roger David Casement for high treason, and he was conveyed back to prison during the afternoon, still under sentence of death. He will, however, it is understood make a last effort to get his conviction quashed by appealing to the House of Lords, but this depends upon circumstances.

It was half-past ten when the five judges, headed by Mr. Justice Darling, took their seats on the bench, and Casement was brought into the dock by warders. This time he was looking very weary from the long strain, but throughout the day he smiled to a lady who sat near him, said who evidently did all she could by responsive smiles to cheer him.

The day was again one of legal arguments, but these were full of interest to all who cared to follow them.

Serjeant Sullivan fought with wonderful spirit for his client, but did not find favour with the great lawyers of the past, whose tomes were piled up before the judges for reference and guidance. His arguments created little impression on their lordships, and although he did not succeed in winning his case the judge paid him a high compliment for the way in which he had sustained the greatest traditions of the King's Courts.

The court was crowded.

Their lordships, when they returned after a brief retirement, told Sir Frederick Smith, the Attorney-General, that they need not trouble him to reply on behalf of the Crown; and after Mr. Justice Darling had delivered judgment dismissing the appeal, Casement was taken back to prison. He smiled at friends in court and waved them a goodbye.

MR. SERJEANT SULLIVAN'S ARGUMENT.

At the opening of the Court, Mr. Serjeant Sullivan at once plunged into the legal argument which he broke off on the previous day. He at first explained that he and the Court seemed to be at cross purposes. When he was discussing acts committed within the realm their lordships were putting to him questions which were directed to the administration of the law within the King's Dominions generally. There was, of course, a great distinction between the realm and the Dominions. The common law was established within the ancient realm of England, and from time to time the realm was added to by statute, and had absorbed a portion of Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, and France nominally remained the King's Dominions for some time after all jurisdiction in France had disappeared. He did not deny that within the King's Dominions the King's law ran, nor did he deny that Parliaments might legislate for the King's Dominions although it might be outside the realm of England, which was a very much more circumscribed geographical locality. In the King's Dominions, such as Gascony, Ireland, Wales, and in Scotland, there was no common law; but they were administered by Commissioners appointed, and there was no doubt that under the statute of Edward III. a number of matters would be crimes in any part of the King's Dominions where there was no statute of treasonable per se, but with regard to two of the matters mentioned in the statute of Edward III. they only squired those treasonable character if they were committed in that part of the King's Dominions—namely, the King's realm—and their criminality depended upon the person who committed them giving his allegiance to the King's realm and peace, and under his protection. For that reason these two matters, which were so circumscribed on the construction of the statute, would not have been capable of extension. The commissions for the King's Dominions did not issue under common law. That caused controversy in Parliament for many years, and was the ground for Parliamentary protest.

A CASE OUTSIDE THE REALM.

Counsel went on to refer again to the Norman baron who owed allegiance to the Kings of France and England.

Mr. Justice Scrutton—You still keep my curiosity unsatisfied. What happened to him?

Mr. Sullivan—The man was dead. (Laughter.)

Mr. Justice Darling—He was a baronet, and had not merely an honorary title, as to-day, but he had military service to perform?

Mr. Sullivan—Yes, and on his death his property was forfeited to the King. There was a claim that the property was assigned before forfeiture, and the question raised that that could not oust the King's claim.

Mr. Justice Scrutton—What happened to the property?

The Attorney-General—The lands were forfeited.

Mr. Justice Scrutton—Because of his adhering to the King's enemies out of the realm?

The Attorney-General—Yes.

Mr. Sullivan proceeded to refer to the cases of Queen Mary, King Charles, and the King and Lynch, on which the Crown partly relied. He said it had been pointed out the first did not bear upon the present case, and, as the second was based upon it, that went by the board as well. In summing up Holt said that there was no instance of something that was declared to be a crime whose existence could not be enquired into or determined by any legal tribunal for want of a venue. The common law could never inform itself of a matter which had arisen outside the realm—in this case the Empire of Germany—when it was within the realm at the time when he gave that aid and comfort, and, therefore, the person could not be tried in any Courts at all for what he had done in Germany unless he was himself actually resident within the realm of the King. That argument was founded on difficulties which arose owing to the doctrine of venue, under which people were only triable within certain districts. The dearth of cases had been dwelt upon, but a guilty man would in all probability absent himself altogether from the country where he might be punished. Therefore, the Court was not very much impressed with the fact that there was very little precedent for; such a prosecution as this. But there was a large amount of authority for the proposition that what the jury had found to be done and what it was not contested, was done by this appellant, was an offence triable in the King's Bench. Mr. Serjeant Sullivan had said that the construction was not a true one, but the Court agreed that a person, who, being within this country, gave aid and comfort to the King's enemies in this country, was adherent to the King's enemies, and if he was in this country and gave aid and comfort to the King's enemies outside, the Court agreed that he was then adherent to the King's enemies. But the Court thought that there was another offence, and that the words of the Statute contained something more.

MEANING OF THE STATUTE.

The Court thought the meaning was this—that if a man gave aid and comfort to the King's enemies—and there were words in opposition to explain what was meant by "adhering to"—by adhering to the King's enemies in his realm, by giving aid and comfort in this realm, or by adhering to the King's enemies elsewhere—that was, by giving aid and comfort elsewhere—that was equally adherent to the King's enemies, and if he was adherent to the King's enemies, then he committed treason which the Statute of Edward III. defined. The reason for that might be given as follows:—The subject of a King owed him allegiance, and the allegiance followed the person of the subject. He was the King's liege wherever he lived, and he might violate his allegiance in any foreign country. It was known to the Court that there was a great deal of authority for the proposition that adherence outside the King's dominions by a person himself outside constituted exemption. Many persons may have debated that when a person could have been tried, but there was ancient opinion for the proposition that it was treason to do what the appellant had been convicted of doing in this case. Mr. Serjeant Sullivan had asked the Court to simply take the Statute and read it as though they had seen it for the first time, and had said that that was the best way to construe any Statute. It was a little difficult for any judge of the King's Bench to say that he read for the first time the Statute of Edward III. They must have read it before that. He did not know that the rule that Mr. Serjeant Sullivan laid down was the altogether acceptable one. The learned judge quoted a commentator to the effect that "long usage is presumed to be the true construction, and the long acquiescence of the Legislature in its interpretation of the effect of its enactment might perhaps be regarded as some sanction and approval of it." This Statute, which was now on for say, had been there and stood long before to-day by lawyers of great learning, by lawyers of very exceptional erudition, in the sense that the Court understood it. Their authority had been attached by Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, who had also attacked Lord Coke. But if the Court were to accede to Mr. Serjeant Sullivan's argument they would have to absolutely disregard the opinion of Lord Coke and other legal authorities, great men, whose opinion had been followed in many questions of extreme difficulty, which had puzzled lawyers for many years past. The Court did not think it necessary to give further reasons for the conclusion at which they had arrived. The Court certainly did not rely on the recent case quoted by Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, simply for the reason that they were of opinion that ample authority for the conclusion at which the Courts came in that case was to be found in the decisions and opinions of the great lawyers to whose names had already referred. It remains, remarked his lordship, in conclusion, to say that the appeal is dismissed.

This ended the proceedings.

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.

Anderson, R. (Belfast). Thompson, G. (Tullyrone)
Fyffe, J. (Belfast).

Lieutenant E. H. Harper.—Much sorrow was expressed in Dungannon on Tuesday as the announcement from the War Office of the death in action of Lieutenant Edgar H. Harper, South Staffordshire Regiment. He was the eldest son of Mr. Henry M. Harper, Northland place, Dungannon, whose youngest son, Lieutenant Ernest M. Harper, Royal Munster Fusiliers, was killed at the Dardanelles on 9th August last. Lieutenant E. H. Harper was educated at Dungannon Royal School, Queen's University, Belfast, and Trinity College, Dublin. He held an appointment as Lecturer in Bangor University, Wales, and prior to the war was Professor in Mathematics in Cork University, which position he relinquished to volunteer in the service of his country. He obtained a commission in the Royal Munster Fusiliers in May, 1915, and was transferred to the South Staffordshire Regiment, where he received promotion. He was an enthusiastic Rugby football player.

Lieutenant H. L. Dickson.—Lieutenant H. L. Dickson, reported wounded, and Monday evening's official list, is a son of Mr. Samuel Dickson, Leawood, Hawthornden road, Knock. He has been in command of the Pioneer Battalion of the Royal Irish Rifles since November, 1914, and served at Lurgan before going overseas. His injuries are slight.

Second Lieutenant James Maxwell.—Second Lieutenant James Maxwell, wounded, is the second son of the late Mr. Robert Maxwell, and Mrs. Maxwell, Jubilee terrace, Downpatrick. He joined the Pioneer Battalion of the Royal Irish Rifles as a cadet at Lurgan, and later received his commission. He accompanied his battalion to the front with the Ulster Division. Prior to the war he was on the staff of Messrs. H. Wallace and Co., solicitors, Downpatrick.

Lieutenant G. C. Finlay.—Lieutenant George Guy Finlay, who has been killed in action, was the second and only surviving son of Colonel Henry T. Finlay, D.L., of Corkagh, Clondalkin, Co. Dublin. He was 29 years of age. Lieutenant Finlay volunteered for active service from the Malay States at the outbreak of the war, and arrived in Ireland in December, 1914. He obtained a commission in the Royal Irish Regiment in January, 1915, and in May of the same year he was attached to a battalion of that regiment, with which he served up to the time of his death. His younger brother was killed in action on 9th May, 1915, at Aubers Ridge.

Lieutenant D. A. Greer.—Lieutenant Donald Alister Greer, who has died from enteric at Amara, Mesopotamia, was the son of the late Mr. Francis Greer, Glenbarr, Palmerston road, Dublin, and Barnagh House, Dungannon, and the only son of Mrs. H. F. Greer, 35 Upper Leeson street, Dublin. He was educated at Castle Park, Dalkey; Tonbridge School, Kent (where he was captain of the Swimming Club and Senior League Cricket, and was in the Football team); and Trinity College, Dublin. In August, 1914, he received a cadetship into Sandhurst, and passed out the following December, when he was gazetted to the Connaught Rangers, and was subsequently promoted to Lieutenant and Adjutant. He joined the battalion in France in 1915, and from that time to the following December was engaged in the warfare of the trenches. When his battalion was ordered to Mesopotamia in December, 1915, Lieutenant Greer accompanied it, Adjutant, and was with the relief column during the subsequent severe fighting. He was very popular with the officers and men.

Lieutenant C. W. Cooney.—Lieutenant C. W. Cooney, of the Connaught Rangers, who is suffering from the effects of a German gas attack, is progressing favourably. He is at present in England. Lieutenant Cooney is a native of Rathgar, Dublin.

Second Lieutenant J. Watson.—Second Lieutenant J. Watson, killed, was a son of Mr. John Watson, Ashfield, Tandragee. He was a clerk in the Ulster Bank, Belfast, and after the outbreak of the war he enlisted in the ranks of the Royal Irish Rifles (North Belfast Volunteers), from which he received a commission in the Royal Munster Fusiliers, when he was not yet 17 years of age. Five months later he was selected for a cadetship at the Royal Military College, without examination, a privilege granted to a limited number of officers in the Special Reserve at the time. He was subsequently gazetted to the Royal Irish Regiment. His brother, Lieutenant H. Hodges, of the R.M.F., was home wounded recently, but has now returned to the front.

Second Lieutenant T. A. K. Gildea.—Second Lieutenant T. A. K. Gildea, only son of Mr. A. K. Gildea, D.L., Clooncormack, Hollymount, Co. Mayo, has been killed in action. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and went to Canada, and there enlisted in the 80th Battalion Toronto University contingent of Princess Patricia's Regiment. On reaching England he received a commission in the Royal Warwickshire Regiment on December 4th, 1915.

Mr. Robert F. Purcell.—Lance-Corporal Robert F. Purcell, of the Leinster Regiment, has been killed in action. He was a son of the late Mr. William F. Purcell, Resident Magistrate, Roscommon.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Society will take place on Friday, July 21st, at 5.30 p.m. at the Westminster Palace Hotel, London. The Hon. C. M. Kellaway, M.P., a member of the Australian Parliament; Senator the Hon. J. H. Keating, and other members of the Dominion Parliaments belonging to the Overseas deputation, and Lord Mashall are expected to be amongst the speakers. Resolutions will be submitted emphasising the need of embodying the principle of proportional representation in any changes in the electoral system of United Kingdom, and in any constitutional re-arrangements affecting Ireland, the United Kingdom, or the Empire as a whole which may be the outcome of the Imperial Conference to be convened after the war.

PARLIAMENT.

said that the condition of all the wounded after the battle of Jutland was carefully examined, and only those men were sent away by rail whose condition justified that procedure. It was a fact that any of them died, nor was it believed that any of them suffered injury.

NATIONAL TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Mr. BYRNE asked the Prime Minister whether he was aware of the injustice being done to Irish national teachers, caused by their salary being paid quarterly, and if he would take steps to see that their salary will in future be paid monthly.

Mr. SAMUEL, who replied, said he could add nothing to the reply given to Mr. Lynch on the 5th inst.

Sir EDWARD CARSON—Is the right hon. gentleman aware that this is a question of the very greatest importance, and that these people look upon it as a great hardship that, for a mere clerical matter, they are put to the greatest inconvenience?

Mr. SAMUEL—I know there is a great deal of feeling on the part of these school teachers. I wish it were only a clerical matter. It is a Treasury matter. It would mean bringing fourteen months into one year. If they can make a suggestion of any practical scheme I am sure the Treasury will consider it with every desire to arrive at a satisfactory result.

Sir EDWARD CARSON—Considering that a great many people have been getting a war bonus, might this comparatively small matter be arranged with the teachers, who are finding great difficulty, I can assure him?

Mr. JOHN REDMOND—I understand the right hon. gentleman not aware that some little time ago the teachers did put forward a scheme that was approved by Mr. Birrell, then Chief Secretary for Ireland, and that it was turned down by the Treasury?

Mr. SAMUEL—Yes, I believe it was found not to be acceptable to the Treasury, but I will communicate again with the Treasury.

Mr. LYNCH—Will you keep an open mind till you receive a resolution from the Irish Urban Council complaining that the price of coal there is 55s. per ton, and, seeing that this price would make it impossible for the poor to have fires during the coming winter and would affect the price of gas, whether he would take steps to provide a steamer which would occasionally bring coal to Tralee at a reasonable freight.

Mr. HARCOURT said he had received the resolution to which the hon. gentleman referred, but would see whether anything could be done; but it must be remembered that the shortage of tonnage was general, and it was not possible to secure specially low rates of freight for any particular locality.

ENGLISH EDUCATION VOTE.

The House went into Committee of Supply (Mr. Whitley in the chair).

On the motion to report progress,

Mr. ARTHUR HENDERSON, President of the Board of Education, said he wished to give the Committee some idea as to how they stood on the vote of £5,737,000 to complete the sum required for salaries and expenses of the Board of Education (England).

On the vote of £5,737,000 to complete the sum required for salaries and expenses of the Board of Education (England),

Mr. HENDERSON, President of the Board of Education, said he wished to give the Committee some idea as to how they stood with regard to the Estimates. This was, he thought, was most important in view of the many statements that had been made regarding the failure of our education system during the great crisis through which we had established the progress made, but he claimed that if they took their education system as a whole it had stood the test of the war, and had done its work well, in a manner calculated to give a great amount of satisfaction. The estimated expenditure for 1915-1917 was £45,186,000. The expenditure five years the expenditure was—1911-12, £14,302,859; 1912-13, £14,332,018; 1914-15, £14,368,794; 1915-16, £15,215,000. The Years of the war showed an increased expenditure, and that increase had been maintained. The Board were not prepared to say there had been no increase in efficiency, but broadly speaking, the local authorities had shown themselves ready to discriminate between what was essential to maintain efficiency and what could, without permanent loss of efficiency, be dispensed with or postponed.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN.

No subject had given the Board so much concern as the employment of children at an early age. (Hear, hear.) Nothing could justify such much apprehension. He thought that one of the reforms they should try to obtain was to put the whole of the children under uniform provision. (Hear, hear.) The Board would regard it as a very grave misfortune if large numbers of children were employed at an early age. He expressed his gratitude to the Board of Agriculture for their co-operation with the Board of Education. Even in spite of their efforts, the number of children engaged in agriculture had nearly doubled. By-laws were being relaxed without proper care and inquiry. He was anxious to say that if the present powers were not sufficient the Government would ask the House to extend those powers.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

Referring to technical education, he said that one of the most satisfactory incidents of the year was the assistance given by the masters and scholars of our technical schools in the way of munition and other war work. There was a great field for their services in connection with the application of science to all industrial problems, and this feeling was helping forward technical education to the front. But there were no less than 200 of our schools in occupation for military purposes, the children being distributed amongst other schools. He wished to pay a tribute to the patriotism of the teachers of this country. Some 20,000 of them were now serving with the colours. There was a great testimony to the military and naval authorities as to their efficiency. No less than 562 of the Board's staff had also joined the colours. He was sorry to say that three of them had been killed.

LESSONS OF THE WAR.

In his opinion, the war had demonstrated the general soundness and solidity of our educational system, and had also disposed of the fallacy that educated people had not moral soundness in our people. (Hear, hear.) The war had also brought home to us that our national prosperity depended upon the scientific and commercial intelligence on problems of industry, commerce, and public administration. He was glad to say that the Department had been able to prepare for a re-conquest of the ground they had lost, and had taken steps to go much further than before after the war was over, and the Committee might rest assured that the preparations made before would not be wasted, but would be reviewed in the light of our experience, and permeated with the energy derived from the war itself. He had always been deeply impressed with the fact that the great problem before the country was to deal with the education of those who were between the elementary school and the University, and what was badly wanted was to secure closer co-operation between the elementary school and the college. Our children left school too soon. (Hear, hear.) The problem of longer education was largely an economic one, but we should at least endeavour to secure that where there was a capable child and a willing parent means should be found for continuing the child's education.

SCIENCE AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

It had been decided to appoint two further Committees to inquire into the position of science in the one case, and of modern languages in the other, in the teaching work of our educational system. (Hear, hear.) He would point out that educational reform was obviously a question of national finance. Just before the war the Government had in hand a scheme for new grants in aid of elementary, secondary, and technical education, and for the training of teachers, some millions of money being involved, but this scheme, of course, fell through.

Mr. TYSON WILSON was speaking, when, at 7 o'clock, the debate was adjourned.

The House rose at 11.2.

HOWTH FISHING INDUSTRY.

LETTER FROM MR. RUSSELL.

Mr. J. J. Clancy, M.P., has received the following letter from Mr. T. W. Russell, M.P., Vice-President of the Department of Agriculture, in reference to the question of transport facilities for the carriage of fish from Howth across the Channel:—

Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction,
Dublin, 17th July, 1916.

Dear Mr. Clancy,—I have received your letter of yesterday's date in regard to the transport facilities for the herring industry at Howth. This matter has been in the hands of the Department on many occasions, and I remember its being raised in connection with the spring mackerel fishing. Ever since the outbreak of war and the utilisation of shipping on emergency work we have been in constant communication with the Board of Trade, the Admiralty, and the railway and shipping companies, and I must say that the several carrying agencies have in these exceedingly difficult times shown every readiness within their available means to secure the rapid transit of perishable produce. I have, however, gone over the position again to-day, and have ordered inquiries to be made of the various companies involved, with a view to seeing whether the pressure you mention can be lightened in any way.—I am, yours faithfully,

T. W. RUSSELL.

A MEMORIAL TO LORD KITCHENER.

A CHURCH IN KERRY.

Sir Arthur Vicars, in a letter to us, makes an appeal for assistance to erect a memorial to the late Lord Kitchener in the little church at Kilflynn, County Kerry, where Lord Kitchener worshipped when a boy. Sir Arthur Vicars writes:—Its may not be generally known that Lord Kitchener was born in and spent the early part of his youth in Kerry. About the year 1849 Mr. Pierce Mahony, of Kilmorna, leat his shooting lodge, called Gunsborough, to Colonel Kitchener, who was looking around for a suitable property to purchase in the neighbourhood—for, just after the famine in 1846-7, many properties could be bought for very little. Lord Kitchener was born at Gunsborough Villa on the 15th June, 1850 (and not 24th June, as in all the Peerages), and baptised on the 22nd September following by Rev. Robert W. Sandes at Aghavallin Church, near Ballylongford. Gunsborough Villa, is situated some 3½ miles from Listowel, and, having long since ceased to be used as a shooting lodge, was sold under the Land Commission by my late half-brother (Mr. George Gun Mahony) to the tenant who occupied the farm. The last visit Lord Kitchener paid to Kerry was in 1912, when he visited his birthplace, and, noticing that the roof of the house was much dilapidated, generously offered to pay for necessary repair, but the owner refused his offer. On his occasion he paid a visit to his godmother, who lives near Listowel, who informed me that she well remembers Lord Kitchener as a boy. I understand that Lord Kitchener as a boy was at first educated at a school situated in the Square of Listowel. Colonel Kitchener was then Chief Secretary for Ireland, and that it was turned down by the Treasury?

Mr. SAMUEL—Yes, I believe it was found not to be acceptable to the Treasury, but I will communicate again with the Treasury.

Mr. LYNCH—Will you keep an open mind till you receive a resolution from the Irish Urban Council complaining that the price of coal there is 55s. per ton, and, seeing that this price would make it impossible for the poor to have fires during the coming winter and would affect the price of gas, whether he would take steps to provide a steamer which would occasionally bring coal to Tralee at a reasonable freight.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE IRISH SITUATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—While the fate of Ireland is hanging in the balance, is it too late to plead for a postponement of any decision on the Home Rule question until after the war is over? Surely everyone with the true interest of his or her country at heart would be content to wait for such a momentous decision until such time as full consideration can be given to every point, and until such time as the brave men who are fighting and bleeding for their country can have a voice in the shaping of her fate.

Would it be too late to suggest compulsion for home service in Ireland? I am convinced that the Sinn Fein rebellion had a very small beginning. Without making excuses for the leaders, their followers were mostly boys and young men who had never been beyond their own market town—certainly never outside their own county—and to these young men and boys the thought of compulsion for active service abroad was full of dread. As the likelihood of compulsion grew more evident, so did the ranks of the Sinn Feiners grow in number, and not till then. Had it been compulsion for home service in Ireland, every man of military age would, I believe, have flocked to the ranks, and without a vast number would have eventually followed the lead of our brave soldiers and taken their place at the front. In any case, their service at home would have freed for foreign service the troops which must now be kept back. The comradeship and discipline would develop a spirit not to be gained by no other means, for the Irish in their pulsiveness are capable of being moulded as no other nation on earth. Many of the proof of this in the wonderful deeds of the men at the front ments abroad, men coming from the very poorest homes and surroundings rising to heights of bravery, chivalry, and devotion. Many homes have not yet learned the spirit of self-sacrifice. Their thoughts and ideas are as narrow as their surroundings; but, given opportunities of development, that portion of the manhood of Ireland which has held back so sadly would become capable of doing as much for us are a noble, if misguided, race. Might I add that the whole-hearted loyalty of the Royal Irish Constabulary—largely composed of farmers' sons—is another proof in favour of my argument.

Whatever may be done with our country, there is one thing of which I am positive—as Royal residence and a member of the Royal Family as Governor would do more towards a happy solution of the difficult problem of the Irish situation than any scheme whatsoever. It would appeal to the pride of Irishmen, and do away once for all with the present leaders. We has suffered much in the past and present from her over many leaders, with their widely different views. Let her now try how she will thrive under the rule of her own Vice-King. If our present King when Prince of Wales, or the Duke of Connaught, had been in Royal residence in Ireland five-and-twenty years ago the Sinn Fein or any other disloyal party would never have had an existence. Perhaps, it is not too late yet?—Yours, etc.,

"A Loyal Patriot."

THE PRICE OF WOOL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—In all the discussions that have taken on the above subject I have not seen any figure quoted as the average for 1914. Surely the Government, in placing 30 per cent. on that year's prices as a maximum to be paid this year, should state what the price actually was in 1914 on which they have arrived at the 30 per cent. Some figure must be given as a basis, and it should be stated, so that farmers can have some idea of the value of their wool. There can does not seem to be any limit on manufacturers' profits, judging by their balance sheets, even after making provision for surplus profits, etc.—Yours, etc.,

"A Farmer."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—The Jews grumbled in the desert, and found fault with God's special providence. Are the Irish farmers any better? From Cape Clear to the Giant's Causeway, and from Howth Head to Achill, one long-sustained growl has been raised about the action of the Government in connection with the sale of wool. Evidently the farmers are not willing to be inconvenienced in the least degree for the good of the State. They own almost the entire land of Ireland. They pay no income tax, no war tax of any kind—of course, I do not refer to "gentlemen farmers." The increase in the cost of commodities for household consumption, such as sugar, tea, etc., does not affect them much, while the increased expenditure for the upkeep of cattle, horses, pigs, sheep, etc., is far more than counterbalanced by the extraordinary prices they have been receiving for their stock for the last two years. What a jeremiad they would raise if their services were in the same predicament as Belgium, Serbia, or Northern France, and they themselves thrown upon the world as outcasts, robbed of their homes, their wealth, their trades, their families, and their country—of everything save their honour and their trust in God!

Instead of that, Ireland is as peaceful and as prosperous as in the most affluent days of piping peace. The townsman, whose salary is the same as it was before the war, does not complain if he has to pay more for the upkeep of his house. Let the farmer imitate his example, and, for the hundredth time, cease to stop growling, and thank God that He grants us freedom, prosperity, and happiness in the midst of the most appalling carnage recorded in the annals of mankind.—Yours, etc.,

"Deo Gratias."

Co. Roscommon, July 17th, 1916.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS IN KINGSTOWN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—Now that the Finance Committee, Kingstown, has been given power to expend the proceeds of the rate of 1d. in the £, struck by the Urban Council, "to provide or assist towards the expenses of any band of music," it is hoped that this important undertaking of administering the fund for the public amusement will be promoted with enterprise, and that the Committee will advance along new lines. It is admitted by everybody that, in point of climate and natural beauty, few watering places in any part of the Kingdom can excel the attractions of Kingstown. The figures of the Meteorological Department show that for low rainfall and duration of sunshine Kingstown is only equalled by one or two other favourite resorts in the south coast of England. Its progress is not, however, as great as its position entitles it to be, and this is largely given why this is so is the relatively small amount of amusements provided locally.

In normal times the main source of attraction during the afternoon and evening in Kingstown is provided at the Pavilion. In addition, two or three bands per week play on the Pier or People's Park in the evening during the bathing season. In the forenoon and afternoon there is no outdoor attraction whatever in the shape of musical or vocal entertainment, and this is the shortcoming which notably distinguishes Kingstown, in common with all Irish watering-places, from cross-Channel holiday resorts. As long as this glaring contrast exists, the Irish holiday-maker will not be satisfied to remain at home, but will prefer those places across the water which, though inferior, perhaps, in climate and other natural advantages, are through the influence of amusements, relieved of the dullness of home resorts.

The first and greatest problem in developing Ireland from a tourist point of view is to make the Irish holiday-seeker discover his own country. This can only be done by brightening our seaside places, so that any other part in the Kingdom. When this has been accomplished, the people from other countries will be attracted to our shores; but we must first begin at home with our own people. The Kingstown Urban Council, before Committees, therefore, in endeavouring to make its town more attractive to visitors by providing more general amusements, is an interesting one, and the Committee's efforts to solve it will be watched by residents here and by local bodies throughout Ireland.

It is respectfully submitted that something like the following scheme might be eventually undertaken, and, if not realised in full this year, might at least be partially attempted—

1. Provide bands every afternoon and forenoon, or as often as the financial resources of the Committee will permit, on the sea front, People's Park, or East Pier.

2. Advertise this fact with pictorial representation in the important towns, cities, and railway stations of Ireland.

With the means at the disposal of the Committee, this programme may be considered too ambitious for the present season. The remedy can be found in making further appeals for subscriptions to the public, and also in asking the Council in future to strike the full rate of a penny in the £ under Section 76 of the Public Health Act, 1907, for those purposes. The object is as useful as any other public service of the district, as the people must be amused as well as housed and fed. The increased expenditure will be returned to the local

FUNDS AGAIN LOWER. GREAT NORTHERN STRONG. OTHER MARKETS GENERALLY WEAKER.

DUBLIN, TUESDAY EVENING.

There was a good deal of business current on 'Change to-day in Government Funds, Textiles, and Dunlops, but most of the day's fluctuations were adverse, while in the first named group rather severe sale pressure was experienced at a further sharp decline. Great Northern Railway Ord. Stock had a smart advance, National Bank shares were freely offered under last price, but were not bid for. Sellers of Marconi Wireless Telegraph shares were in the majority in symbathy probably with lower prices from London. The Ord. fell 1s. to 62s. 6d. Canadians at 30s. 6d., and Spanish Trust, at the same figure, were, if anything, lower. The only transaction in Home Railways was the quotation (99) for Great Northern Ord. Stock. This figure is no less than 3 points higher than last quoted bid. Baronial Guaranteed and Tramways were entirely idle. Dunlop Rubber Ord. repeated 45s. 6d., and the Pref. fell 1½d. to 20s. 10½d. Parent Tyre Ord. were 2s. 3d. at the close, after small transactions at 2½s. The Def. opened 4½d. lower at 2s. 9d. Later 2s. 2½s. 3d. was paid, and other hours buyers were willing to pay 2s. 3d., but no shares offered. The Pref. repeated 16s. 4½d. French Income Bonds were called 17s. 6d. Of the Gas, Bakery, Drapery, and Miscellaneous securities were neglected. Textiles changed hands freely, with comparatively light alterations. Coats Ord. fell a ½, and 1½ a Pref. Ord. ⅛, but the Pref. rose ⅛. Calico Print ters met steady attention at 10s. 10½d., ⅛-⅛ later 11s. was paid. Lever Bros. "C" Pref. eased 3d. to 21s. Thwaites Shares were on offer at or about last prices. E. and J. Burke Debs. fell ½ to 85.

LONDON, TUESDAY.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES IRREGULAR.

In the Miscellaneous and Industrial market there was a good deal of irregularity, but no sustained brightness. Shipping descriptions came in for a fair amount of attention. P. and O. Def. rose 1s to 33¾, but Royal Mails, after being higher, finished unchanged. Furness Withys rose up to 48/9, and Canards were rather better at 89/9. Prince Line moved on to 73/9. Harrisons were offered back from 61/9, and the Pref., at 52/-, was also lower. There was little business among Supply Shares. Lyons were steady around 89/6. Eastmans lost 3d., but Bovril Ord., at 21/3, was rather better. Hirsch were not dealt in. Hudson's Bays were offered in the Lead group, and receded ¾ to 6¼. Argentine Southern Lands, at 2½, were better. Peking Syndicate was weakened to that extent. Coals did not vary in the Textile group. Courtaulds were firm around 7, and finished rather over that figure. There were many falls of around ¼ among Bank Shares. Cities Services were rather firmer at 35⅝.

LONDON MINING MARKET DULL.

There was no sign of increased activity in the Mining market. Russian Shares showed to advantage during the first part of the session, assisted by the foreign brilliant successes of the Russian troops and but the improvement brought out realisations, and the close was weaker. Kaffirs were rather ragged, price receiving irregular and narrow limits. In the Diamond group, De Beers were offered, but other quotations were quite cheerful. Rhodesians ruled quiet and hesitating, and base metal descriptions were again quiet and unsteady. Rio copper metal rose £2 10s. 0d. per ton, but there was a set-back of £3 0 0. per ton in the metal. Tin shares were weaker. Shares Modderfontein reacted ½ to 17½, but Meyer and Charltons recovered to that extent. Modder East ⅛ to ⅜, and Modder Deep ¼ to ⅜ were both weaker. There were other irregular movements. De Beers, among Diamonds, were offered back ¼ to 10¾, and Jagersfontein, after being higher, left off 6d. down at 65/9. Charterede soared 3d. to 3s. as regards other Rhodesians, Tanks fell to 48/9. Westralians were dull. Great Boulder Props. rose 1/3, were 6d weaker. Broken Hill Props. also lost 6d. at 58/3. Among Copper Shares, Tintos relapsed 1s. to 60s. Russians closed dull. Base-Metallics held to 5/4

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed July 13th, 1916) 6 p.c.

There was a fair demand for loan accommodation in Lombard street. The Joint Stock institutions were still charging 5 per cent. for both daily and weekly advances, but a fair amount of daily money continues to offer in the open market at 4 to 4½ per cent. The Discount Market was much the same as yesterday. General conditions were quiet, there was a moderate business in fine bills up to three months' date. The Bank of England continues to transact a considerable business in Treasury Bills, the shorter maturities being in chief request. The New York exchange was rather firmer at 4.76-⅛.

The Silver Market was reactionary, and not very brisk. The quotation for spot bars was fixed 2½d. lower after yesterday's rise, at 35¾d. per oz. Moderate offerings being reported on Chinese and American account. No Change rates on Haiphong, Holland, Spain, and Scandinavia moved against this country. Russian, Swiss, and American currencies depreciated in value.

The following foreign exchange rates were current to-day on New York cables, 4.76⅛ to 4.76⅜; Paris cables, 28.12 to 28.14; Amsterdam cables, 11.47½ to 11.49½; Italy cables, 30.45 to 30.55; Scandinavia cables, 16.73 to 16.83; Petrograd cables, 158 to 166; Rio de Janeiro, 60 days' bills, 12¾d.; Buenos Ayres, 90 days' bills, 48 1/4d.
